About

A creative designer with a strong understanding of user-centered design principles and a passion for creating intuitive and visually appealing products. I have major experience with prototyping tools such as figma. I have a strong background in design, human-computer interaction, and I am able to use this knowledge to inform your design decisions. I am able to work collaboratively with cross-functional teams, including developers, researchers, and product managers, to bring designs to life while constantly seeking to learn and stay up-to-date with the latest design trends and techniques.
